

7/23 Work and Pleasure

Today is Thursday, I must pick up dishwasher pods. I have plans to go to the Rowanston League for the first time. I have work.

Yesterday, I went to work and Ben made lamb curry for dinner.

I typed more of my notes.

It's been nice having a lot of time to write on my time.

I appreciated writing about St. Brigid and learned a little more about liturgical magic.

In appreciating the importance of a Christian, yesterday, I reviewed my inspiration pool for my time and I thought about Individualized Treatment Plans.

It's been really important to me to structure what it is that I'm working on and planning has not been as straightforward.

I compare it to traversal math. I was really into the metaphor of caves for a while and learned a lot from this book about cave rescue - things you can do as the rescuer and the rescuee.

It helps to get expert advice from people that are familiar with the caves and to not go alone.

I liked my meeting with Ellie and getting clear on what we're making, reference.

Two Sams Studies show that goal psychology was introduced in a privileged society and it was a paradigm that induced motivation from a different kind of being than the ones we have today.

Studies have been shown that the "depressive" model is the most effective when you have a limited time with the patient.

Let's be clear about your manifestation target.

You're a free being and your soul unconsciously manifests challenges to show you where you're less free.

I need to remind everyone of their medical appointments.

I would like to get Gene Goodnick done.

I suppose, it's as simple as putting it on the calendar but after August 17.

From July 30 - August 17, I'll be in a groove of working 11-6pm every day. It's going to be fine, but yeah, the coverage situation at work - when has it not been that?

In a world of manifestation - that's fairly low priority for me.

Ellie is great - we are talking about where I'm less free and I'm vulnerable, I'm really about hypnosis to be safe, I'm not sure what a campaign really is.

this is how you see the team together to create a well-rounded campaign.

Campaign hats -

I borrowed a book about it and we will get to the bottom of it for sure. I'm looking forward to Tracy's notes on my new fiscal plan.

Manifestation... manifestation.

I am building my vision and I'm looking for people to partner with.
