Deep breath - developing themes - using concepts - This weekend, I have a meeting with Julie and it's pretty intriguing. Long road though.
The work here and then how into 14 concepts.
On - thinking about the theoreticalization of Embracing the Medical Other - I appreciate the idea of leaving into something that is so central in a way, but perhaps, something that needs to be processed.
The feeling of being judged for being sick.
The "obstetric angle" - the feeling of how to accept ourselves and our unique situation - more through the gut - The idea of formal white robes - process of doctor?

Am going to make on to the next week - I was thinking that the book about the image of the middle ages is going so slow - but probably because it's useful thinking about the role of hypochondria in the imagination.
I was appreciating how my most recent meeting could be more formalized.
A part of me really wants to learn the formal ritual - one of my LO passions that I've used for passion claim exercise and so appreciate there's something to that in the long way morning pages has passed out.
I appreciate the feeling of another successful group activity organized

		9 principles

Really appreciate that the book with the exercise for the postmodern made me that each concept had a visualisation - even a mess more helps "mythology" the idea - take something and give it vividness.
This is very much related to the courses of San Bellino, the idea of having these little database grids - catalogs of objects that have the different messages & would like to see $16 \times 4 = 64$
